JNT CONSULTING WAS AT ERC's 2003 GLOBAL WORKFORCE SYMPOSIUM IN ATLANTA

Over 40 countries attended the 2003 ERC Conference that was held in Atlanta, Georgia.

The conference was informative as it provided a broad range of information that is useful to global corporate operations.

The GMS designation classes had an overwhelming response among industry professionals and its contents were useful especially on sensitivity to culture, a facet to pay attention to during the transitional period of moving an individual from point of origin to point of destination.

Professionals from across the globe agreed on the need to better understand differences of culture.

Experienced professionals in cross cultural settings reinforced and shared their experiences. Many people acquired knowledge valuable to their business.

Other areas covered were related to global workforce issues on Health and Security.

Delegates from JNT Consulting enjoyed meeting new industry colleagues, learning new information and experiencing great keynote speakers.

Closing the conference was a lively keynote speaker, Vince Poscente. He had everyone participating by standing on chairs, marching like the opening of the Olympic games. Vince spoke about "Being Invincible" and the need for focus on achievement of goals and gave many humorous anecdotes from his own experience.

The Cultural Immersion to an American Tradition

An immersion to one of the American cultural practices and traditions (Halloween Party) was included in the program.

It was fascinating to observe conference attendees who came with their unique costumes, from their own country and some demonstrated their own creativities.

Delegates from countries where Halloween is not really celebrated were somewhat bemused by how big an event it is in the USA.

The music, the food and ambiance provided a great setting for chatting with everyone, meeting new acquaintances and networking.

Conference attendees had a good time as seen in the following page. Lots of pictures were taken and its beyond memory to name everyone, especially those not from planet earth!

From traditional to contemporary, the Halloween party was a fun and colorful event. See if you can spot the JNT Consulting delegates.
